

Grammar Revision

Relative Clauses

Relative Clauses: The Rules

Relative clauses give extra information related to a previously mentioned noun or pronoun within a sentence. A relative clause always starts with a relative pronoun.

Jess was going to a fancy dress party.
She was dressed as Batman.

The second sentence adds some extra information about the noun in the first sentence so we can turn it into a relative clause, like this...

Jess, who was dressed as Batman, was going to a fancy dress party.

Who is a relative pronoun so this clause of extra information is called a relative clause. As this is extra, non-essential (non-restrictive) information we put the clause in commas.

Relative Clauses: The Rules

A relative clause almost always starts with a relative pronoun. Other relative pronouns are:

that whom whose who

which

Relative Clauses: The Rules

Where in a sentence?

In all of the sentences we've looked at so far, the relative clauses have always been in the middle of the main clause e.g.

25 Maple Street, which has been up for sale for years, is apparently haunted.

A ghost, whose name is Mr. Stonegarden, roams the corridors.

The estate agent, who badly needs a sale, is frightened to show people around.

They were all embedded* inside the main clause.
Therefore, we could also call them embedded relative clauses.
However, relative clauses don't always have to be embedded...

*in the middle of

Relative Clauses: The Rules

Where in a sentence?

Look at this sentence. Where is the relative clause now? How do you know?

The children all did well in the spelling test,
which made their teacher smile.

Which is the relative pronoun so this time the relative clause is after the main clause. We still need a comma before the relative clause as this is also extra, non-essential (non-restrictive) information.

Relative Clauses: The Tricky Bits

Relative clauses can be non-restrictive (not essential to the meaning of the sentence) or restrictive (essential to the meaning of the sentence).
Here is a restrictive relative clause...

The book that I bought yesterday cost me five pounds.

That is a relative pronoun so this is a relative clause. This time the information in the extra clause is essential (restrictive) to the meaning of the sentence so therefore we don't need to use commas.

Here's another example of a restrictive relative clause:

The distraught teacher threw the test papers up in the air that were full of mistakes.

Relative Clauses: The Rules

Where in a sentence?

Look at this sentence. Where is the relative clause now? How do you know?

The boy travelled to the park,
which is full of flowers in bloom.

Which is the relative pronoun so this time the relative clause is after the main clause. We still need a comma before the relative clause as this is also extra, non-essential (non-restrictive) information.

Relative Clauses: The Rules

Where in a sentence?

Look at this sentence. Where is the relative clause now? How do you know?

The boy travelled to the park,
which is full of flowers in bloom.

Which is the relative pronoun so this time the relative clause is after the main clause. We still need a comma before the relative clause as this is also extra, non-essential (non-restrictive) information.

